Bringing pets and people closer

...everyone should know

Your cat or dog is a big part of your life, so looking after their day-to-day health is a big priority. And part of that responsibility is protecting them from the threat posed by intestinal parasites. These intestinal worms present a health risk to you and your pet.

...gives maximum protection

Provides broad-spectrum protection against the most common intestinal parasites.

For dogs and cats¹⁻¹⁰:

- Milbemax every 3 months
- Treats hookworm, roundworm and tapeworm – including whipworm in dogs
- Can be given to puppies from 2 weeks of age and 0.5kg (when used according to label directions)
- Can be given to kittens from 6 weeks of age and 0.5kg (when used according to label directions)
- Provides protection against heartworm – if dosed monthly

...takes the worry out of worms

Intestinal parasites are introduced to cats and dogs through everyday contact with eggs in soil, or through close contact with other animals. Dogs also need protection from heartworm, which is spread by mosquitoes. If left untreated, heartworm could result in death.

ROUNDWORM

WHIPWORM¹

HOOKWORM

TAPEWORM

...watches out for your pet...

For cats and dogs the symptoms can be varied, depending on the infestation:

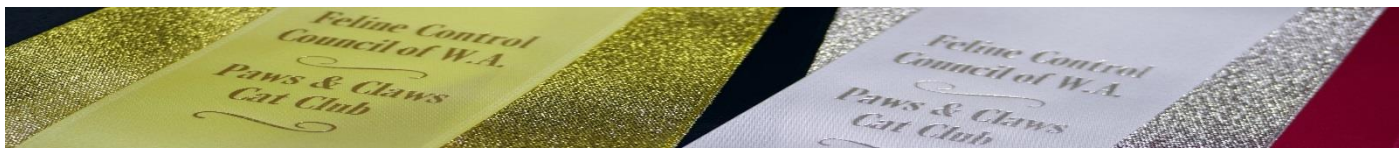

- Scooting along the ground (dogs)
- Poor growth
- Poor coat, loss of vitality and lethargy
- Pot-bellied appearance
- Inflammation of the intestinal wall, abdominal pain
- Diarrhoea and vomiting
- Intestinal bleeding, which might show up in stools
- Itchy sores (often on paws)

...and for you

Children are often most at risk due to their lack of hygiene awareness, close contact with pets, or from contaminated sandpits or soil. Depending on the type of worm infestation, the health risks can range from mild to extreme:

- Intensely itchy red tracts in the skin, known as 'summer itch'
- Damage to internal organs
- Blindness (roundworm)
- Life threatening formation of cysts in the vital organs (Hydatid tapeworm)
